Joybunny poked his face out of the hole. This was the first time he'd come out of his burrow. His little pink nose twitched as he sniffed the different springtime smells. As he looked around, Joybunny saw a group of bright yellow daffodils. He hopped closer and noticed something moving about. It began to buzz loudly, scaring the bunny. The black and yellow bumblebee flew out of the daffodil, its wings vibrating up and down. It soon went away. Losing sight of it, Joybunny hopped on. It didn't take long before he heard other strange noises. His long, furry ears stood straight up in the air. He hopped towards the stream. The water was flowing over the rocks, making small waterfalls. He stuck his paw into the cold water. "Quack! Quack! Quack!" Joybunny looked upstream and saw a white duck with an orange beak. It was swimming towards him, followed by three ducklings. They swam right up to him. Joybunny giggled when the duckling dipped its head under the water and pulled out a green leaf. Another duckling came out of the stream. It tried to eat Joybunny's fur, biting him. "Ouch!" he shouted and hopped away.
